

On 13 October 2005 Sydney Morning Herald published the story of Nicole Haj and her battle with meningococcal septicaemia. She will be showing her gratitude as part of Research Australia's Thank You Day on 7 November, when people get a chance to thank scientists or researchers who have made a difference to their lives. Haj's thank you goes to SSRI's Dr. Galina Kaseko, Michael Sanig, and Sue-Anne Sanig in recognition of the Institute's work in developing novel approaches to the prevention and treatment of meningococcal disease.

Read her story here. This article was also republished in Strains here.